White

White Teas are relatively rare. The tea leaf buds are picked the day before the shoots open, giving them a very subtle sweetness with a flowery, nutty aroma and smooth finish. White teas are full of antioxidants and are low in caffeine.

Green

Green Teas are the least processed of all tea types, which gives them a fresh quality that tea lovers enjoy throughout the world. Their active enzymes and antioxidants make for a beverage rich in healthfulness. Green tea can be enjoyed daily. It is light and refreshing, low in caffeine and is host to a wide variety of cancer fighting antioxidants.

Oolong

Oolong Teas offer the best qualities of both black and green teas in terms of taste and health. Tea connoisseurs around the world know this classic variety for its distinctive flavors and fragrances. Oolong tea is well known for reducing cholesterol, aids in weight loss and lowers blood sugar.

Black

Black Teas are full of flavor and are blended with a cavalcade of robust tastes including sweet, malty, light, crisp and can even have wine-like characteristics. Often complemented with a spot of cream, always rich in contributing to health and well-being.

Herbal

Herbal Teas come in a broad range of soothing flavors, unique medicinal qualities, all of which offer a relaxing journey to enjoyment.

Rooibos (Red)

Rooibos (Red Tea) is grown exclusively in the mountains of South Africa. Rich in antioxidants with a distinctive robust flavor.
